Mannequin arms are emerging at the shoulder from the earth as if pushing the head and body up out of the ground. The mannequin arms are covered with glass mosaic in a vine pattern in green stained glass and blossoms in multiple bright colors of stained glass. The mannequin head is half buried, face down, with woven yard covering the exposed back of the head to form streaming hair on the head. The arms are anchored with 9" rods. The "sculpture" is located in the rocks of the xerographic garden area.

Nancy Norton is a local artist; well know for her leaded glass work, glass collages and paintings with alcohol ink.
