

Little Critters
Alexis Bosley

Medium: Acrylic Paint

Although beetles would not be the first thing that comes to mind when discussing the beauty of nature, if given more attention to, one would see they are much more exquisite than originally believed. In this piece I wanted to highlight beetles' uniqueness by illustrating their mesmerizing shapes and colors.

The wildlife found in nature has always been a focal point for my enjoyment of the outdoors. My love of the natural world is something I incorporate into my life by not only studying geology but by also expressing it through my artwork.
